

A close-up photograph of a person's hand sowing seeds into dark, rich soil. The hand is positioned in the center-right of the frame, with fingers gently dropping seeds into a small hole in the earth. The soil is dark brown and appears moist and fertile. The background is slightly blurred, focusing attention on the hand and the soil.

Some plants
like cool
weather and are best grown
in the spring or fall.

